Tips On How To Capture A Terrific Summer

(NAPSA)—Summertime—we wait all year for family vacations, outdoor activities and, most of all, relaxation. To help your summer fun last a lifetime, take a camera with you to get photographs you will want to keep.

Practically every photo can be picture-perfect if you follow a few basic tips:

- Plan your photos carefully. Take a few extra moments to frame your shot.

- When taking pictures of people, try to capture them while they are active.

- Don't position anyone so they're looking directly into the sun.

- Be aware of what is behind your subject. Watch for palm trees or objects that will look like they "sprout" from your subject's head.

- Also, if your subject is in the shadows—whether indoors or outdoors—always use a flash.

Another important element for taking great photos is your film. For clean, clear images with minimized blurring, Fujicolor 800 and 400 speed films are ideal for a variety of picture-taking settings such as surfers in the ocean or a neighborhood soccer game. Good for both indoor and outdoor pictures, 200 speed film can be used to get brilliant, natural colors, and works well in variable light.

better pictures is to get close to your subjects. Many of today's point-and-shoot cameras have zoom lenses that can capture detailed close-ups. Fujifilm offers a broad range of cameras that feature a zoom lens, including the Fujifilm Zoom Date 1300, with a zoom lens that can go from 28mm wide angle to tight 130mm close-ups. It also comes with an extra large LCD panel, making it easy to read the camera's functions.

The FinePix 30i also features digital video with sound and digital picture voice annotation capabilities, to make sure you don't forget your summer delights.
