2. Remove unused social networks and mobile apps

Social media sites possess a wealth of personal information that can be stolen without proper security measures in place. Unused or old accounts should be deactivated and personal information should be removed.

Additionally, Bonilla encourages mobile users to delete apps they do not frequent from their smartphones, as these often collect and share data. Make sure to check the security settings before installing apps. If they require access to contacts, locations or other data, decide if the app is worth sharing that information.

3. Manage financial accounts

Similar to social media accounts, Americans should remove financial information from online vendor accounts. If you do not frequent an online retailer, Bonilla says to check out as a guest to reduce the number of websites that store your financial information.

While many companies have fraud and security settings in place, data can be at risk if a company experiences a breach. Using more-secure payment options like PayPal can also help keep your data secure.

These steps can help limit data breaches, but Bonilla said that Americans must be aware that any data shared online could be stolen.

"We can never truly remove content about us that is available online, nor can we fully prevent criminals from attempting to breach our data," Bonilla said. "Consider limiting the amount of personal info you share online. The less information available, the safer you can be."

Whatever it is, it could mean a great opportunity for a talented high school student—perhaps one you know. That’s because the sixth annual Drive for Design contest is on. It invites all U.S. students in grades 10 through 12 to design a Jeep® Wrangler for the year 2030.
